WHISKEY APPRECIATION

In Kilkenny, history is never far from the glass.

One of the earliest written mentions of Irish whiskey appears in the Red Book of Ossory, a 14th-century manuscript kept at St. Canice's Cathedral. Just as those pages preserve the past, every drop of Irish whiskey carries craft, character, and heritage.

Whiskey can be enjoyed in many ways—neat to experience its full depth, over ice for a softer edge, or with a drop of water to release hidden notes. However you take it, you're part of a tradition centuries in the making.

Irish whiskey is made in four classic styles:

Single Malt - 100% malted barley, distilled in one distillery, rich and complex.

Single Pot Still - uniquely Irish, using malted and unmalted barley for a creamy, spicy character.

Grain - lighter and smoother, often from maize or wheat, easy to sip.

Blended - a combination of styles, balanced and approachable.

We invite you to savour, explore, and let each glass connect you to Kilkenny's living history.

THE WHISKEY JOURNEY: NOSE, TASTE & FINISH

Every whiskey tells its story in three parts:

The Nose

Pause before you sip. Inhale aromas of vanilla, honey, spice, oak, or fruit. The nose sets the stage.

The Taste

The first sip coats the palate with flavours, from soft sweetness to warming spice. This is where the distiller's craft shines.

The Finish

After swallowing, flavours linger. A long, smooth finish warms and endures; a shorter, crisp finish refreshes. The finish leaves the lasting impression, inviting the next sip.
